THE ARTISTS whose works are included in the present loan exhibition from the Milch Gallery are, with few exceptions, well-known to the art conscious public, their work having been included in many group shows held in art galleries and museums throughout the United States. Each has won recognition as an important artist in his respective field and is still creating work that is both accomplished and personal. Among those are to be found the names of Kroll, Dehn, Pittman, Etnier, Bosa, Gonzalez, di Gioai, and Greenwood. Each has possessed the honesty and courage to be himself during these times when non-objective art dominates the field and there is little or no attention paid to work conceived in either the realistic or impressionistic idioms. Time alone will determine what contribution these artists have made and will continue to make to the art of our day. In the meanwhile we have the opportunity of enjoying qualities in their work that are meaningful to us.

According to most present day opinions and evaluations, a number of the items in this exhibition would be classed as conservative works, that is, the subject matter of the work is recognizable as such and expressed in graphic terms that have a definite visual relationship to it. When so much is being written to extoll the merits of non-objective art and so little favoring the realistic, it is well to consider the fact that all works conceived realistically are not bad nor are all works expressed in abstract terms good. With this in mind, those viewing the works in the present exhibition will enjoy the experience of forming their own opinions regarding the merits of the various items on display, for here one will find realistic, expressionistic, and non-objective pictures hanging side by side.
