E. Ainslie Burke

The issue is not whether you recognize what the artist saw in nature but whether you understand what he said about it. In this particular case the artist is a devoted student of nature, not for the sake of the objects alone but for the sense of power, growth, and insistent creativity revealed in its total structure. The objective is the understanding of man through whose awareness of the natural elements we recognize, as he says, "his fears, his habits, his frustrations and ambitions" as part of the common quest for a satisfactory and spiritually stimulating environment.

E. Ainslie Burke was born in Omaha, Nebraska, in 1922. On a Carnegie Foundation Scholarship he studied at the Maryland Institute of Art and Johns Hopkins University before his service with the U.S. Navy during the war. Further studies were pursued at the Art Students League in New York under McNulty, Lewis Kantor and Liberté and at the School of Fine Arts in Mexico City under David Siqueiros before his first one-man show at the A.A.A. Gallery in 1954. He has exhibited in many national competitive shows including those of the Toledo Museum (1950), the Brooklyn Museum (1953), the Pennsylvania Academy (1957, 1959) and has a long list of awards including the Woodstock Foundation prize and a Fullbright grant for painting in Italy in 1957-58. One man shows have been held at Kraushaar Galleries in New York and his work is represented in the permanent collections of Columbia University, the Springfield (Massachusetts) Museum, and Syracuse University. Since 1962 he has been Associate Professor of Art at Syracuse University.
